

YOUR ONLINE JEWELRY NEWS BROUGHT TO YOU BY ASJRA.

© June 30, 2013, Association for the Study of Jewelry & Related Arts, LLC.
All information in this newsletter is for ASJRA members only.

AURORA BUTTERFLY OF PEACE EXTENDED AT MUSEUM OF FINE ARTS, BOSTON

The Museum of Fine Arts, Boston has announced that the loan of the Aurora Butterfly of Peace, an extraordinary arrangement of fancy colored diamonds, has been extended to October 31. This dazzling display has been a favorite of young and old visiting the Rita J. and Stanley H. Kaplan Family Foundation Gallery, a gallery devoted to the display of jewelry. The Aurora Butterfly of Peace diamond collection is an artwork consisting of 240 natural, fancy colored diamonds weighing a combined total of 167 carats. This butterfly-shaped diamond mosaic was created over a period of 12 years by Alan Bronstein and Harry Rodman. The diamonds were collected and assembled one stone at a time. The Aurora Butterfly of Peace was conceived as an eternal icon of love, beauty, energy, nature, and peace. It symbolizes a spiritual connection to earth for all mankind.

